ON mine, tactical points there appears to be more than one school of thinking among Soviet leaders. This was shown several days ago when a fairly unimpressive speech with regard to the War in France, was considerably watered down in "Pravda" with most of the more violent anti-Western references omitted. There have been more fairly obvious illustrations of late, but these variations are perhaps nowhere to be seen more clearly than in the field of Soviet literature, reflecting with a large measure of accuracy the various and diverging trends in the supreme leadership.

LAST October, it will be remembered, Ilya Ehrenburg and several other writers came out in favor of a relaxation of controls and restrictions in the field of literature. This theoretical appeal was followed by Ehrenburg's own work, a novel "The Thaw," which though not directly connected with politics, epitomized the new Soviet literary doctrine. The thaw has come, the icy winter has ended. "The Thaw" appeared quite late politically on a first look. It said nothing about the future belonged to Russia, and that it was not by mere coincidence that the brave new world was first established in Russia. The novel dealt with the affairs of a small town in the U.S.S.R. and the cover of two no longer very young couples and in one case justified a divorce, suggesting rather than stating in brief fiction. The father of the main hero was said to have been arrested during the purge of 1938 and the hero himself, a member of the Komsomol, was excluded and socially blacklisted. But the arrested father, wonderful to relate for once, is not called a "Kulak" or the people. Or take the following short description: "When the newspapers reported the rehabilitation of the Moscow physicist, Lena hurried into the hospital, called for Vera Scherer (her Jewish friend), intending to say something about it, and simply embraced her." An eloquent silence that.

French Union Army Retreats Farther In Delta Area

HANOI, Monday (Reuters). — French Union forces continued their withdrawal to a new defensive line south of Hanoi in Delta area while French and Vietnamese second officers met for the second time in the "true" ceasefire to the north to discuss a possible cease-fire.

(According to the Vietnamese radio, the delegates talked over the prisoner-of-war question today. Observers said that they were not expected to touch on the main topics — marking out a cease-fire line — without further instructions from Geneva.)

Fighting in northern Indo-China was reported to have died down a few hours before the delegates met today, but the French High Command announced that their air force had launched "extremely heavy" attacks against Communist south-west of Hanoi.

Bombers and fighter bombers flew more than 150 sorties against the Viet Cong base along the rim of the Red River delta for the attack on Hanoi. Three rebel divisions — 30,000 men — are said to be massed along the western rim of the delta.

A few miles inside the delta, a French Union armored force moved north to protect Hanoi and its road to Haiphong Port to the east, halted to form a new line at Thinh Duc Ha, 25 miles south of Hanoi on a main road.

In Paris, the Government has ordered its military commanders to withdraw from France and Germany "to combat" all regular army personnel on non-essential duties for service in Indo-China. The Government will consider further withdrawal of French troops from Indo-China, particularly in the Red River Delta, if the Viet Cong continue to fail to supply a sufficient number of men.

Solel Boneh Plans Military Airfields For Turkey

JERUSALEM, Monday (Reuters). — Master plans for the construction of military airfields in Turkey have been prepared by Solel Boneh at the request of the Turkish authorities following the construction of a large airfield there which is expected to be completed at the end of this year.

Mr. J. Shulman, member of the Solel Boneh Directorate, told The Jerusalem Post in an interview today.

Mr. Shulman has just returned from a tour of inspection in Turkey. He said that the airfield is to cost eight million Turkish pounds, or about $100 million, and is to be paid in hard currency. In addition, Solel Boneh is entering on two large airfield projects in Turkey with Turkish and American capital.

The State Department made the disclosure after the Russians had declared two U.S. officials as spies in Russia. It stated that the U.S. had completed the Soviet officials between February and June.

Moscow announced that the two Americans had carried out espionage in Russia, but the State Department categorically rejected the charge as "baseless."

However, it said that the two officers will be withdrawn from Moscow assignments.

The two Americans ordered to leave Moscow immediately were identified as Lt. Col. Howard L. Welch, U.S. Assistant Military Attaché in Moscow, and Maj. Walter McKinnon, Assistant Air Attache at the American Embassy in Moscow.

The Russians expelled from this country were listed as: Capt. Igor A. Amosov, Assistant Naval Attaché at the Soviet Embassy, Alexander P. Kovtsov, Second Secretary of the Soviet Legation, and Lt. Col. E. Fivner, Assistant Air Attache at the Soviet Embassy.

The Americans were declared persona non grata in a note delivered on Saturday.

Salem Returns Empty-Handed From Lebanon

The recent talks between the Egyptian Minister of National Guidance, Major Salah Salem, and Lebanese leaders have failed to produce any substantial agreement, NEADS reported from Cairo yesterday.

Announcing this on his return from Beirut, Major Salem added that no accord similar to the recent agreement between Egypt and Saudi Arabia had been achieved. The main aim of his mission had been to bring the Lebanese back into the Arab fold, but he had failed.

During his five-day talks in Beirut, Major Salem had conferred with Lebanese President Fouad Chehab and Foreign Minister Alfred Naccache.

Tonight, he is due to leave for Amman for talks with King Hussein in an effort to obtain the support of the government of the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan.

Legion Used Extra Troops For Blow at J'lem—Lavon

LLOYD DEPLORES SALEM STATEMENT ON ISRAEL

LONDON, Monday (INA). — The Minister of State for War, Mr. Lloyd, deplored the statement by Major Salah Salem, Egyptian Minister of National Guidance, that Egypt might attack Israel as soon as the British troops were out of the Canal Zone.

Mr. Lloyd said that the statement was very much to be deplored if it represented the views of the Egyptian Government.

The leader of the "Tory rebels," Mr. Julian Amery, declared that Major Salem's statement created conditions which made it difficult to negotiate with the Egyptians.

Mr. Lloyd added, however, that it was hoped that Anglo-Egyptian negotiations would be resumed in the relatively near future.

Jordan's Attempt To Shun Blame Exposed

UNITED NATIONS, Monday (INA). — An Israel spokesman said here yesterday that there was "not one word" in the allegations by the Jordan authorities that Israel was preparing to seize the Arab sector of Jerusalem by force.

In a statement published here in the Israeli delegation called the allegations a patent attempt to divert public attention from Jordan's part in the outbreak of shooting in Jerusalem.

It is greatly to be hoped that the latest Jordan dispatch, which does not hide new intentions on Jordan's part to break the peace in Jerusalem again.

Safety of Holy Places Assured

There was a dead silence in the Knesset yesterday when Mr. P. Lavon, the Minister of Defence, rose to report on behalf of the Government on the Legion's "carefully planned and prepared attack" on Jerusalem last week.

The debate that followed centred on the question of outside responsibility for the shooting, with both sides of the opposition vying with each other to demonstrate that the flare-up of fighting over the past year was due, in the last resort, to the Western desire to maintain the position of arbitrators in the area.

In addition, the Left held the Israeli Government responsible for its failure to conciliate the Arabs, while the Right saw it as the result of the Government's policy of appeasement.

There could not be a shadow of doubt, Mr. Lavon said, that the attack had been planned on a high level and carried out in accordance with the instructions of the Government.

Some hours before the shooting started on Wednesday the Legion brought in two extra companies, one of its 82nd and one of its 10th battalions, while a battalion of the Jordan National Guard was moved into the border. At the same time houses near the wall were evacuated.

Israel was holding routine manoeuvres that day, and the frontier was quite lightly manned. It was quite some time before the fire returned from the Israeli positions was commensurate with that of the attackers.

When an order was given to reply to the attack, the Defence Minister gave specific orders that the Holy Places were not to be damaged. He believed that to be the wish of the Israeli people, although he knew that it made the job of the defenders more difficult. He also forbade the use of artillery although this could have silenced the enemy's fire in a matter of minutes.

Explains MAC Session

Because of the extreme seriousness of the incident, and because it affected the sanctity of Jerusalem, Mr. Lavon said, the Government was holding a session of the MAC (Military and Civilian) on this incident.

"I am not ashamed to admit," he continued, "that I see this as an opportunity for the UN representatives to prove that, at least in exceptional circumstances, they are able to produce the right decision and not a tragedy. We must be able to see whether Jerusalem will be another 'Scorpios' Acre. It is difficult for us to believe... that the Holy Places will be the sole criterion. But it may be that disillusion awaits us again."

If the Legion staged the attack in order to restore its credibility in recent incidents, it had failed, despite the strategic advantage of its position on the Wall and the hampering instructions that had been issued to the Israeli Army. Nor had they succeeded in frightening Jewish Jerusalem, which carried on with its work undisturbed. By all accounts, it was the Old City that had been overtaken by panic and the Government might still have to pay dearly for this blow to its prestige.

He said that it was possible that the attack was a prelude to a two-pronged attack on the Old City, in which two policemen had been killed. It had been an attack on Israel territory and sovereignty. Heavy fire had been returned after the second attack, with the result that the Israeli-Syrian MAC had apportioned the guilt equally — once to Syria and once to Israel. The Syrian attacks were not doing as well.

Mapam Expected To Maintain Unity
